MERCER'S SALVATION ARMY

out as they realized that there was no "dust" in sight.

The doctor could scarcely believe his eyes, but his optics were more faithful than his followers, and he soon found that he had less than a dozen men left out of which to organize the commissioned part of his army.

These protested their undying devotion, and in order to somewhat restore the doctor's equanimity Sam Macleod indulged in a scathing speech, in which he violontly denounced Hascall for building hotels for breeding places for cockroaches and other vermin. He said he couldn't see how the citizens of Omaha could introduce Hascall to Pounding Away on the Battered Bass Dram

HALLELUJAH MEETING OF THE FAITHFUL

Promise of Over Twenty Thousand Votes Failed to Loosen the Doctor's Purse Strings, and This Had a Depress. ing Effect Upon the Cohorts.

Dr. Mercer's mendicant medley of medicine-making monomaniacs met again Sunday evening at the newly secured headquarters in the Patterson block at Seventeenth and Douglas, and endeavored to drive a larger spigot in the Mercer bar'i. Instead of being successful a big chunk of grief and disappointment was the lot of the mosodial clongators, for the doctor rebelled against the mercenary disposition evinced by his "en-thusiastic supporters," and insisted that his friendship and warm approval our it to be sufficient compensation for any shouting that had been done in the interest of his candidacy.

It was a very lil-advised position for the It was a very lif-advised position for the doctor to take, but then he never was a particularly astute politician and could hardly have been expected to know what the harvest would be. This is the second time within a week that the doctor has unwittingly "queered" himself with his followers, the first being last Wednesday night, when he steered them all through the barroom at his hatel without asking a single man to his hotel without asking a single man to stop and have a dring. There are lots of people in Omaha who could stand treatment like this, and, in fact, would take no notice of it whatever, but, unfortunately for the doctor, that portion of the human family that refused to be comforted with anything short of his candidacy is not built that way The Wednesday episode occasioned much adverse comment in the ranks of the supposedly faithful, but one or two lieutenants suppressed the threatened rebellion by stationary in the suppressed the threatened rebellion by stationary in the suppressed ing that It was purely an oversight on the part of the doctor. When the second "over-sight" came, nowever, it was beyond the power of any subordinate to make amends, and a real old-fashioned strike and walkout was straightway inaugurated. The meeting was called to perfect a Salvation Army organization of the Mercer forces, with captains, lieutenants, corporals sergeants and ensigns in every ward and precinct of the city, with a few colonels, majors and brigadier generals scattered about here and there, and all under the supervision and direction of Major General Ehrenpfort, a sweet-scented political gera-nium from the First ward, and his adjutant,

Amos Juryfixer Van Alstine. Doctor Donned His War Paint. The major general had charge of the meet-

He told the assembled patriots just how it ought to be done, but said that it would be well to have a few figures sub-mitted before getting down to active busi-The doctor did not have to illustrate by means of a diagram to make the assembled Mercerites understand what he wanted. They realized that he wanted them to tickle his ear with stories of the thousands of votes that he was going to get, and they immediately began falling over each other in a frantic endeavor to outdo anything previously attempted in the way of lusty, full-grown pleages of universal support.

The doctor kept tab on the back of his cuff, and during a slight lull, when the wholesale pomisers had stopped to take breath, he made a total of the figures presented, and found that he would receive a little over 20,000 votes that he could absolutely bank on till the judgment day. This pleased him and he would have been less than human if he had not said so. He did not indulge in any ridiculous exhibition of joy, but he showed a genuine, though staid and dignified, pleasure in a latitudinous smile that could have been twice wrapped around his head and tied in a bow knot bearound his head and then in a bow knot be-hind his ears. Then it was for the first time that he positively knew that he was going to be elected and he felt that he could afford to be somewhat independent in his remarks. He declared that the press was interfering altogether too much in the affairs of the city.

statement and demanded to know how he was going to throw the 3,632 votes that he had promised unless he "interfered," and furthermore unless the coin was advanced for that interference. This struck the key-note to which many a soul in that vicinity was attuned, and in an instant the doctor was overwhemed with a discordant overture in the key of $.

A lieutenant, who made a living at painting until he struck something that promised better as a "Mercer man." demanded pay for several days' work that he claimed to have done in furthering the doctor's candidacy. The doctor demurred. By the rarest piece of good luck he is still alive.

He said he did not think he was yet in a position to pay off, and thought that if any of his supporters really feit as much interest in the welfare of Omaha as he did they would want to wait until his election was actually cinched before they would cease their efforts or allow any question so mercenary as this to take possession of their minds.
Impolitic man that he was to make such a statement to that crowd!
Fifty colored men, who had been marshaled there by two or three lieutenants, immediately got up and left the room in a body in disgust, while others kept dropping

Eller Receives a Judicial Reminder that His Scheme Won't Work.

SHALL NOT PRACTICE FRAUD ON VOTERS

Judges Keysor and Hopewell's Lucid Decision Restraining Etter from Sailing Under False Cotors-Baxter, the Nonpartisan, and Magney, Populist.

Equity and politics mingled in Judge Keysor's court yesterday morning, where Judges Keysor and Hopewell heard the arguments in the petitions filed by George A. Magney and Irving F. Baxter to prevent Judge Eller from using the term "People's non-partisan" in connection with the appearance of his name on the official ballot for county judge. James P. Meikle and C. S. Montgomery represented Mr. Baxter and Ben S. Baker defended Judge Elier's position. Mr. Mag-himself again. It was charged that Bemis had not appointed the right men to office, and the Fourth ward primary chestnut was rehashed.

After that there was no disposition to prolong the meeting, and the doctor and his very much curtailed "army" floated out into ney conducted his own case. Mr. Magney objects to the use of the word "people's" as a usurpation of his rights, while Mr. Baxter contends that the word "nonpartisan" is illegal because he himself is the nonpartisan candidate, and Eller jumped into the ring too late to properly make use of the term.

Mr. Meikle argued that Mr. Magney was the people's candidate and Mr. Baxter the nonpartisan nominee, and that Eiler had combined both words on his petition with the direct intention of misleading the voters and causing them to vote for him, believing that they were voting for the principles of the people's or nonpartisan parties. The purpose of the Australian barlot law in placing the name of the party opposite purpose of building up any political party, but in order to prevent deception of the voter. The action of Judge Eller was in direct antagonism to the principle as well as the letter of the law. Many of the voters were unfettered and Eller sought to take advantage of their ignorance. Mr. Magney took the ground that if Judge Eller could file a petition representing himself as a "people's nonpartisan" candidate and have his name placed on the official ballot accordingly it would be perfectly proper for any other man to represent himself as a republican nonpartisan or democratic non-partisan candidate. He had brought the action for the purpose of ascertaining whether in the opinion of the court the law city he wanted a man to do some hauling contemplated any such arrangement.

In defending Judge Eller's action Mr. Baker contended that the terms "people's" and "nonpartisan" were not copyrighted and might be used by any candidate at his discretion. He disputed the right of Mr. Baxter to represent himself as a nonpartisan candidate on the ground that he was the candidate of only 130 out of over 400 mempers of the Douglas county bar.

The remainder of the forenoon was occupled by the argument of Mr. Montgomery for Mr. Baxter, after which the court auployed to haul ber goods from the Bachelor home to the Webster street depot. The drayman protested, but was informed that nounced that the decisions in the two cases would be rendered at 2 o'clock. Eiter Was Called Down. ANNOUNCEMENTS. "The Girl I Left Behind Me's" secret is out. It holds a place among plays similar to that held by Ciara Morris among actresses. She is known as the pocket-handkerchief actress. "The Girl" is known as the pockethandkerchief play. It makes people cry. A lady speaking about it said "I couldn't help crying my self when I saw the awful position Kate Kension was placed in during that battle scene and her father was holding his revolver ready to kill her rather than that she should fail into the sayages hands, but when I saw a hig fat man in few to the beautiful and the sayages hands. when I saw a big fat man in front of me boo-hooing like a boy that had spilled a pitcher of milk I had to smile—it seemed so funny to see a fat man crying even when he had to." There is a good deal of weeping during that third act of the piny at the Empire theater and it is no uncommon thing to see men wiping their eyes and swallowing sobs when the tension of the battle scene is at its greatest. "The Giri I Left Behind Me" will play three nights at the Royd, com-mencing Thursday evening next, with matinee Saturday.

That quaint comedian, Willie Collier, and his unexcelled company come to the Fif-teenth Street theater for three nights, commencing next Thursday, in that exceptional ludicrous farcical entertainment entitled "Hoss and Hoss." Mr. Collier, although "Hoss and Hoss." Mr. Collier, although still a very young man, takes rank today as one of the foremost comedians in America. The company which surrounds him will include Mr. Sherman Wade, James B. Gentry, Ed Readway, M. I. Heckert, David Andrada, John Hyanes, Miss Louise Allen Collier, Helena Collier, Helen Reimer, Madge Yorke, Mae Davenport and others. "Hoss and Hoss." will, of course, be the vehicle in which the commany will display their various talents. This play is now in its fourth season, and has recently been rewritten, rejuvenated and reconstructed until it is now like a new play.

Work at Miller Park. Work at Miller park is progressing nicely,

The park commissioners have decided to have the dredging for the lake completed this fall and the water turned on. The lake is located in the center of the park and will be between 700 and 800 feet in length and 800 and 400 feet in width. It will be fed by the small streams of water running through the small streams of water running through the park, which will be dammed for the purpose.
